Of late, there has been a lot of speculation that Samsung might be planning to introduce the Galaxy Note 5 very soon and this is causing quite a bit of excitement. Samsung is reportedly going to launch the phone on the 9th of November, and if the Galaxy Note 5 launch date is confirmed, then it means that the phone will be out by the end of this year. The Galaxy Note 5 has already gone through a number of leak reveals and we have already seen a fair amount of information about the device. Today, we have an image of the back of the Galaxy Note 5 which shows off the Home button and the fingerprint scanner. The Galaxy Note 5 will probably be the most important smartphone of the year, and it looks like Samsung is going to pack some really impressive features into the device. You will get a display which has a resolution of 1440 x 2880 pixels, and it is expected that the Galaxy Note 5 will come with the same 1440 x 2560 pixels Super AMOLED display as we found on the Galaxy Note 4. The phone is also going to be water resistant and it will probably come with a Galaxy Gear. What is interesting about this image is the existence of a different sized fingerprint sensor, and the fingerprint scanner might be one of the main ways to get access to the device. The company said it is working on a mobile payment service, and it is calling this service Samsung Pay. The report states that Samsung is going to launch the Samsung Pay service at the IFA show next week and then work to get it ready for a launch in the later part of the year. Samsung is currently the leader in the mobile payments market with the new service, but if it fails then Apple and Google are the likely challengers in this market.

Samsung has stated that the Samsung Pay service will be available on all Galaxy devices and the upcoming Galaxy Note 5 is going to have a very important role to play. Samsung will need to compete against Apple which launched Apple Pay and Google which has offered Android Pay. The report also states that Samsung is going to have to fight against Samsung Pay at the European show, and it is interesting that they would go to such lengths.

As the information is based on anonymous sources, it is best to treat it with a pinch of salt. The Galaxy Note 5 will be Samsung's first real 'phablet' device, and it is going to be really interesting to see what the company can offer to its loyal fans. The only information that we have at the

March 14, 2559 BE - Little problem. How do you use this version if you can't touch the screen? "You mean this version won't even have a screen?" - Exactly. "I won't do it. - I should have said "I won't" instead of "I won't" because the screen is part of the interface and you won't be able to use the interface if you can't touch the screen. Well, I think I can do without the screen. " fffad4f19a
