Field of the Invention The present invention relates to multichip semiconductor device packages for application, for example, in power management, and more particularly, to a semiconductor chip assembly including a flex substrate having a projection formed thereon. 2. Description of Related Art Solid-state devices such as, for example, light emitting diodes (LEDs) and laser diodes are commonly formed on silicon substrates and packaged as hybrid packages. For instance, a thin LED die may be mounted on a substrate. A lens may be formed over the LED die and a phosphor layer may be deposited over the lens. The LED die, the lens and the phosphor layer may be encapsulated in a package material. The package material may be molded or otherwise formed to protect the LED die and the other package components from the environment outside the package. Although effective, such packages often require multiple components and therefore are relatively large, can be costly to fabricate, and require a relatively large amount of material.Only two weeks left to Double your gift Climate change is destroying the Arctic sea ice cover by about twice as much as previously thought. According to a new study out this week in Nature, Arctic sea ice is melting at an unprecedented pace. Ice melt in the Arctic has doubled in the past few decades. "Arctic sea ice has declined markedly, with the summer minimum extent decreasing by about 14 percent from 1979 to 2012," explains lead study author Eric Rignot, professor of Earth system science at the University of California Irvine. And that kind of rapid decline can translate into drastic impacts for communities in the region. The ice contains about 10 billion metric tons of water per year. "Recent warming and ice loss has ba244e880a
